

SCREEN STUDIES

FROM SCRIPT TO SCREEN, AND BEYOND

Screen Studies is a dynamic new digital platform comprising an exceptional collection of content from Bloomsbury and Faber & Faber to support moving image studies, featuring:

- An expanding range of iconic and contemporary screenplays, fully-searchable and presented in industry-standard studio format, including Dunkirk, The Grand Budapest Hotel and The Big Lebowski
- Authoritative coverage of works by leading filmmakers such as Wes Anderson, Joel Coen and Ethan Coen, and Christopher Nolan, providing insight into professional and creative practice
- Instant access to over 240 critical and contextual eBooks, on a diverse range of genres, regions, themes, and filmmakers – including practical instruction on screenwriting, and filmmaking techniques
- An illustrated timeline of cinema history, to enhance contextual understanding and provide links to related content elsewhere throughout the resource
- Powerful advanced search, tailored taxonomy, and personalization features, allowing users to discover and browse seamlessly between content types, and make notes, print, and save relevant content

Updated and expanded annually, Screen Studies is an essential resource for academics and students engaged in research and learning around film and media history, theory, and practice.

Screen Studies is available for free institutional trials.
